REVIEW OF

PROJECT USEFUL

A. Problem:

1. To determine whether or not Project USEFUL should be continued and, if continued, in what form.

B. Background:

2. Project USEFUL had its inception, in 1954, following acceptance of the idea that a closer relationship and better understanding between CIA and the military was essential to accomplishing effective coordination in the field in time of war. The resultant course was designed to give the military a more complete and accurate picture of the mission, organization and functions of the Agency, with special reference to war planning and CIA support of the military in wartime. As the threat of war receded and relations between the Agency and the military establishment in other areas of mutual interest grew closer, the original purpose of the course was gradually altered and the course content broadened in an effort to give selected military representatives greater understanding of the organization and functions of the Agency and to create better appreciation of how the Agency and the military services can provide mutual support in peace as well as in varying degrees of war. Unspoken was the basic desire to develop among the military a more responsive and cooperative attitude with a view to facilitating the Agency mission at all times.
